In Achel, a girl hangs the Belgian Tricolour from a first floor window and waves goodbye to troops serving with the 8th Battalion Rifle Brigade as the driver of their M5 half-track starts up the engine. Detachments from the 23rd Hussars and the Rifle Brigade - as seen here, a Sherman tank, an M5 half-track, a Humber scout car, a universal carrier and a Loyd carrier with a six-pounder anti-tank gun in tow - and a jeep from the 10th Surrey Regiment RA move out of Achel along a tree-lined road past civilians who bombard passing troops with apples as a parting gift. Armour and motorised infantry from the 23rd Hussars and the 8th Rifle Brigade are seen deploying in heath land near the Dutch-Belgium frontier on both sides of a narrow track leading towards Heeze, their first objective inside Holland; the AFVs seen here include M5 half-tracks, universal carriers, Humber scout cars, Sherman 75mm and 17-pounder (Firefly) gun tanks and OP/rear-link variants and Stuart VI recce tanks. The cameraman focuses on one Sherman whose tank commander is seen scanning the surrounding countryside through binoculars; a troop/squadron commander is seen giving directions to other tanks by waving his arms.

The cameraman surveys a section of the Grave - s'Hertogenbosch road in Hintham over which are scattered the remains of several destroyed horse-drawn 10.5cm le.TH18 howitzer detachments from the 712th Wehrmacht Infantry Division; parts from dead draught animals have evidently been hacked off by hungry Dutch civilians for food. Nearby, Sherman tanks and tank crews from the East Riding Yeomanry's 'B' and 'C' squadrons are seen waiting to enter s'Hertogenbosch to support units of the 53rd (Welsh) Division engaged in fighting in the city. An 'O' group is held between the ERY's CO and his squadron commanders around his Humber scout car; Shermans from the ERY's 'B' squadron are seen setting off into battle. Armour, infantry and RAMC units pass a shrapnel-peppered German sign on the outskirts of s'Hertogenbosch; nearby is parked a captured BMW motorcycle combination while a few yards away an M10 Achilles 17-pounder SPG from 65th Anti-Tank Regiment RA stands guard. A 160th Brigade REME Scammell wrecker lorry tows a dead draught horse away for burial; a Dutchman skilfully helps himself to some horseflesh. In the garden suburb on s'Hertogenbosch' northern outskirts, 4.2 inch mortar teams from the 1st Battalion Manchester Regiment's 'D' company are seen in action.

THE 51ST (HIGHLAND) DIVISION LIBERATES BOXTEL

<https://www.iwm.org.uk/collections/item/object/1060007914>

An AFPU jeep passes a battered German road sign as it enters Boxtel. Dutch civilians watch traffic from 152nd Infantry Brigade and 33rd Armoured Brigade - in the form of a White scout car and CMP 15-cwt truck and trailer from the 5th Battalion Seaforth Highlanders, a Hillman light utility car and Sherman tanks from the East Riding Yeomanry and the armoured brigade's HQ troop - head through the town to continue 51st (Highland) Division's advance along the Dommel river towards Vught and s'Hertogenbosch. A group of approximately 30 US, British and Polish airborne troops sheltered by the Dutch Underground after being cut off from 2nd Army's lines during Operation Market-Garden is seen eating, sipping mugs of tea, comparing captured German weapons (Luger and Walther PPK pistols), chatting to civilians and members of the Highland Division, posing for group portraits and boarding 3-ton lorries which will take them to GHQ; insignia on their uniforms and headgear identifies most of them as belonging to variously the 82nd US Airborne Division ("The Screaming Eagles"), 1st British Airborne Division's 2nd Battalion South Staffordshire Regiment, the 1st Polish Parachute Brigade and the Glider Pilot Regiment.

13.29 Why did Operation Market Garden fail?

<https://www.iwm.org.uk/history/why-did-operation-market-garden-fail>

In the Summer of 1944, the western Allies had a big problem. Having broken out from Normandy, Allied Supreme Commander General Eisenhower wanted to advance on Germany on a broad front. But logistical issues meant that the Allies couldn't supply multiple army Groups with the fuel, food and ammunition they needed simultaneously. However, one British general thought that he had the solution.

Field Marshal Montgomery believed that the Allies should employ one bold stroke to shorten the war. His plan, Operation Market Garden, would put the Allies across the Rhine on Germany's frontier in a few days and possibly end the war by Christmas 1944.

The battle would become one of the most controversial episodes of the Second World War, featuring daring assaults, strategic blunders and heroic defences. A battle which would come so close to success, before falling at the final hurdle. In this episode of IWM Stories, curator Sean Rehling examines Operation Market Garden.
